Carol Service and Picnic. Yesterday afternoon the scholars of St. Andrew's Cathedral Sunday-school, to the number of nearly one hundred, met in the Cathedral for a carol service. The Bishop of Honolulu and the Rev. J. M. Silver conducted the service, and the surpliced boy choir sang short psalms, sentences and most of the Easter hymns.

After the service was over the scholars with their banners marched up to the Bishop's residence, Nuuanu Valley, where games were indulged in for a time, when tea was served. Nearly two hundred persons were present. The refreshments were provided by the members of the congregation. The affair The bark Saranac, Captain D. B. BOLD SWINDLERS.

Methods of the New York Confidence Men of Fifty Years Ago.

"I doubt if the confidence man of the present day could hold his own against the sharper of fifty years ago," said an old New Yorker. "In those days the opportunities for open swindling were greater than now, and the methods employed were far more tricky. Who would think of comparing the modern bunco steerer to the sleek and suave mock auctioneer, for example? He was the pest of the dry goods mer-Miss Anne Hamlin Panke has been ap- chants of olden times. The customer was generally swindled by substituting goods of an inferior quality for those actually displayed for sale. The sawdust man subsequently used the same method in perpetrating his cheats. I remember an incident which happened there which will show how shrewd these men were. A merchant came from Virginia to lay in a supply of dry-goods. He chanced to wander past this mock auctioneer's establishment and was induced to enter. In his note-book he had marked down every article he desired. Here the goods were unpacked, and it was found that the veriest trash had been substituted for the articles displayed at the auction sale. Through Mr. Conkling's efforts some of the money was afterward recovered.

"Another famous mock auctioneer

had an establishment at the corner of Pine and Pearl streets. A gentleman entered his store one day and purchased a watch for one hundred dollars. Afterward he showed it to Mr. Samuel Brown, of Samuel Brown & Co., remarking that he had made a great bargain. Mr. Brown informed the gentleman that he had been swindled, and that if he would go with him the following Monday (it being Saturday) to the place where he made the purchase, he would try to recover the money. It was agreed. On Sunday as the gentleman was in the reading-room of the hotel where he was stopping an elderly man approached him and engaged him in conversation. The merchant incidentally spoke of the watch he had purchased, remarking that he feared he had been swindled. 'Let me look at it,' said the other. The watch was produced and examined, whereupon the elder man said: "If you think that the watch is not worth one hundred dollars, you can sell it to me for that price." The bargain was clinched, and the merchant pocketed the money. Not long afterward a walk was proposed to a site up-town, where at that time an extensive view could be had of Long Island Sound. While they were admiring the prospect a large, imposing-looking man came forward and accested the other. A general conversation followed, during which the stranger spoke of a wonderful safe he was about to have pat-

"'Here,' he continued, 'is the model. "He took from his pocket a small iron safe, which he opened with a spring. A small roll of paper fell out. Apparently he had not noticed this occurrence, for he turned around and bet his comrade one hundred dollars that there was a roll of paper in the safe.

"Bet him!" urged the merchant, as

"'Very well, I will then,' replied the other. 'I have just one hundred dollars in my pocket.' Then he began fumbling in his pocket, but could find no money. "Oh! I remember! I bought a watch from you this morning. Just lend me that one hundred dollars until we reach the hotel.' The merchant complied and was made stakeholder. When the money had been put up the stranger nonchalantly took the safe from his pocket, touched the spring and behold a roll of paper dropped into

"'How did you do it?' exclaimed the merchant in astonishment. "That is the secret I intend to have patented, replied the stranger, as he coolly pocketed the money and walked away. It is needless to say that the merchant never saw his one hundred dollars. It was a neat piece of swindling, and originated in the very mock auction shop where the merchant had purchased the watch. It appears that the proprietors had found out that an investigation was to be had and resorted to this device to escape trouble."-N. Y. Mail and Express.

WAYS OF WAITERS.

THE SORT OF SERVANTS WHO SEEM TO SERVE THE PUBLIC BEST.

Why One Proprietor Employs Young Women as Waiters-Another Man Prefers Colored Folks-The Virtues of

Irish Waiters-The French. Groups of dapper clerks sat around little tables in a Broadway restaurant down town the other day, while they uncovered their heads to the breeze that blew down from a row of swiftly moving fans that swung from the ceiling. Trim young wemen in cool dresses tripped about from table to table, took the orders of the hungry young men, and returned at intervals with plates heaped with summer viands. Every once in the while a portly baldheaded man would come in, and a trim girl would trip up to him, too, and smilingly take his order.

Behind the cashier's desk sat a gray haired man with glasses who raked in all | GOLDEN C. COFFEFthe money that the dapper young clerks and the baldheaded men paid for their meals. He was the man who first started a restaurant in town with young women for waiters. "Why do you employ girls?" a re-quickly and satisfactorily. They work for this firm from 8 in the morning until 7 at night, with recess for dinner and supper." COLORED FOLKS. The next day after listening to the grayhaired restaurateur's encomium of his fair waiter's the reporter dropped in for luncheon at a well known Park row dining saloon. A genial old colored man, whose face was wreathed in smiles, and who wore a long, snow-white apron, spread a napkin on the table at which he sat down, handed a bill of fare to him, and with a polite "Yes, sir, all right," hurried off to the kitchen to bring the eatables ordered. He spread the full dishes before the reporter when he came back ten minutes later, and then stood at a vacant table some distance away and behind the reporter and patiently waited until the meal was finished. Then he asked if anything else was wanted, and receiving a negative reply, handed the customer a check, bowed and retired. Behind the desk at which the reporter paid the check sat a man who had been ness of catering to the whims and wants of hungry business men who are always

'Why do I keep colored waiters?" he said. "Why, because I wouldn't have any others. My customers like them, and want them. I have waiters here who came to work for me before the war My experience is that colored waiters are by far the best in the market. They are more amenable to discipline than white men, and they certainly are more civil and attentive. They don't make life a burden to a guest if he doesn't choose to fee them. Who ever heard of a strike where colored waiters were employed and treated as they ought their ability, but as a rule it averages $8 a week and board. Here the waiters treat us well and we treat them likewise. When they are sick they draw half pay regularly until they are well again." NEAT IRISHMEN. The reporter sauntered later on over to the famous rotunda of another down

Neat Irishmen with white aprons scurried back and forth between the invisible kitchen and the counters, bringing all sorts of hot and cold dain-For three hours the procession back and forth was kept up, and for three hours the shoals of business men shot the food down their throats with that heroic indifference to dyspepsia and that wild and awful haste that are the peculiar characteristics of the down town business man. The jingle of coin on the lunch counter frequently mingled with the clatter of dishes, and bespoke the welcome fee to the waiter. Upstairs in the manager's office the manager paused a long time, as if wrestling with a problem, when he was asked why he preferred white waiters. 'Well,' he replied at length, "they have been in the house ever since the days when Charles Dickens was a guest here. As far as I am able to judge, the white waiters are the most expeditious in service, and therefore the most satisfactory to the guests and ourselves. We have a large custom daily, and it is an object to get the customers served and let them depart quickly. Delay would mean a loss of 331/2 per cent. of income, which is a big item when the noon trade climbs up into the thousands. The Irish waiters handle the rush of orders so that we have no loss at all. We have colored help for hall boys and find that as such they are without an equal. In the dining room proper, where things go more leisurely than in the rotunda, we have French waiters, and they probably are the best for that sort of service. The Irish waiters get from $8 to $9 a week and board, and the French about the same with the perquisites of fees, which are sometimes something handsome."-New York Sun.

Not a Toilet Soap.

The French chemists have solved the problem of what shall be done with the millions of pounds of waste grease known as wool fat by finding a means of turning it into soap. The fat having been heated to the melting point, absorbs certain compounds of sulphur, for which it seems to have a remarkable chemical affinity, to the extent of retaining in a fixed state 100 times its volume of sulphureted hydrogen. When the fat thereafter is allowed to cool, it is found to be soap. The combination of substances destroys the distinctive unpleasant odor of both, the mixture being fine and of perfect homogenity. Manufactured soap of this kind has already taken its place as a commercial product in France. It is not a toilet soap, but it is so cheap that it is likely to displace soaps based on soda for many important uses, particularly in vine culture and horticulture as a defense against the insects that prey upon plants. None of the plant vermin like a sulphur application. The soap would also have its sanitary uses as a powerful disinfectant, and perhaps a remedy for some cutaneous ailments.-Frank Leslie's.

A Toothless Circular Saw.

At the Hudson river railroad shops is a toothless steel circular saw, thirty-eight inches in diameter and three-eighths of an inch thick at the edge, which will cut off a bar of iron in a short time. A stream of water is kept pouring over it to prevent cracking. The ends of a rail wear out first, and when cut off the rest can be used on side tracks.
